CARLISLE IN A QUANDARY.

As the President for gold reasons has expunged "offensive partisanship" from the list of offenses displeasing to the Administration, and "pernicious activity" in favor of the gold trust is commended at the White House, Secretary Carlisle is at a loss how to proceed in the campaign in Kentucky. If he speaks in favor of the single gold standard it will be in the interest of the Republicans and he cannot endorse the silver heresy by advocating the election of Hardin, who is pronounced silver man. He is not yet certain whether the time has arrived for him to throw off all disguises and come out squarely for the Republicans. To do that might solidify the silver men in the Democratic ranks and result in solid silver delegations from the Western and Southern States to the National Conventions. It is therefore probable that he will not take the stump in Kentucky during the campaign as he can plead as an excuse that he is very busy endeavoring to keep the gold reserve in the treasury intact.

There is really no difference between the Democratic and Republican platforms in Kentucky. Both declare for the gold standard; both are opposed to Negro equality in public places and both are opposed to Force bills. There is a difference, however, between the candidates on the two tickets. Bradley, the Republican nominee, proclaims from every stand that he is in favor of the single gold standard and maintaining our credit abroad. Hardin, the Democratic nominee, though standing on a gold platform, declares for free coinage and prosperity at home. If Carlisle says aught it will be for the gold standard and must therefore help the Republicans, and as he does not care at this stage of the game which the gold trust is playing to show his hand, he will probably keep away from Kentucky until after election.

To this complexion has it come at last that John G. Carlisle, Secretary of the United States Treasury under a so-called Democratic Administration, cannot say a word in favor of the financial policy of that Administration in the State of Kentucky without helping the Republican candidate for Governor and United States Senator. Yet there are men so completely begogged in the mists of partisanship, that they believe there is a difference in the two old parties because one is called Republican and the other Democratic.

HEAVY GOLD SHIPMENTS.

The gold shipments from New York continue unabated. During the first six months of this year the exports of gold amounted to $34,496,144 and the imports $21,388,755. In July and August the exports were $18,523,075, and the imports $1,383,754. Since September 1st the drain has been as heavy as in August. The syndicate has made good a part of this loss by depositing gold in the Treasury in exchange for greenbacks, but how long it will continue to do so can only be surmised. As its business is to make money it is liable at any time to reduce the reserve ten or fifteen millions at one haul by presenting greenbacks for redemption and thus force another bond issue.

The public Treasury of the greatest country that the sun shines upon is, in consequence of the adoption of the gold standard, at the mercy of the most merciless and unscrupulous combination of money sharks that ever existed.

VETERANS OF THE WAR.

The grand encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Louisville, Ky., has brought about 200,000 strangers to the city. It is attended by veterans of the war, Confederates as well as Union men, and a majority of those who now walk the streets of Louisville arm in arm were arrayed on the battle field against each other thirty-one years ago.

A feature of the parade of the Naval Veterans' Association was a score or more of veterans of the Mexican war, who, too feeble to walk, rode in carriages. Those men, who carried the Stars and Stripes to the City of Mexico nearly fifty years ago, are now in the sere and yellow leaf, but they were accorded a place in a procession of those who fought beneath the same flag fifteen years later, though some of them were on the wrong side in the war for the Union.

Ex-CONGRESSMAN BETAN illustrates an argument on the silver question thus: "The gold man asks if it was right for the Government to buy metal worth 50 cents, and, coining it, declare it to be worth $1. The free coins man, in answer, asked if any man would sell his silver for 50 cents when he could get $1 for it. A small boy in the corner answered: 'I would.' The arguers were astonished, and rushed up to see who had made the answer. The boy's mother stopped them with the remark: 'Never mind him; he's an idiot.'

It is reported that the Supreme Court of Nebraska has reached a decision on the Omaha Fire and Police Board controversy which caused so much trouble in Omaha recently. It is believed that the decision will sustain the contention of the new board, and oust the old Commissioners by declaring the new law unconstitutional.

THE DURRANT TRIAL.

The Aunt and Sister of the Murdered Girl on the Stand.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 11.—The prosecution in the Durrant case thought an important witness against Durrant had been found in the person of John Curran, Mountain House, Sierra county. Chief of Detectives Lees telegraphed Sheriff A. C. Busch of Sierra regarding the story that Curran had seen Durrant and Blanche Lamont board the Valencia street car on April 8d. This evidence, if given, would strengthen the testimony against the prisoner. Sheriff Busch telephoned to Detective Lees this morning that he had seen Curran, who was positive he had seen Blanche Lamont and Durrant board the car in question at the hour stated, namely 8:30 p. m., but that he could not swear to the date. When the case was resumed in court to-day Mrs. C. G. Noble, aunt of the murdered girl, continued her testimony, commenced yesterday. After refreshing her memory she said Durrant had come to her house to talk about Blanche on April 18th.

Asked if she knew Blanche's weight at the time of death, the witness said she only knew what Durrant had told her about her weight. An objection from the defense prevented the witness from telling what the weight was. On cross-examination it was tried to show by the witness that Durrant had first visited at her house at the special request of witness, and that Mrs. Noble had asked Durrant as a favor to show Blanche some attention. The witness however, quickly answered that she had no recollection of ever having made any such request. Mrs. Noble denied any such request. Durrant had once kept Blanche out late and had apologized for doing so. The next time they went out together Maud Lamont, the sister of Blanche, accompanied them. Asked to mention other callers on Blanche Lamont, she named Mr. Spencer, an elderly man.

John J. Daly, a dairyman, was the next witness. He had aided in the search of the Emmanuel Church for the clothing of the murdered girl. His testimony elicited nothing of importance.

When the name of Maud Lamont was called a ripple of excitement went round the court-room. Maud, the sister of Blanche, is a rosy-cheeked girl with auburn hair and a neat figure, dressed in deepest black. She testified that Blanche was born at Rockford, Illinois, and from thence the family went to Dillon, Montana. Maud came to San Francisco in June, 1894. Blanche came the following September. Blanche was twenty-one at the time of her disappearance; the witness is twenty. Maud identified the rings worn by Blanche. The one with the chip diamond was Maud's. She had exchanged rings with Blanche, and Blanche had her (Maud's) ring at the time of her disappearance.

The District Attorney in trying to get in the question as to Blanche's weight, asked Maud how she compared in size to Blanche. The witness answered that she was smaller than Blanche. She testified that Durrant was a prominent member of the Christian Endeavor Society, at whose meetings she and Blanche frequently met Durrant. The prisoner often escorted the sisters home from meetings.

Two days after Blanche's disappearance Durrant came to the house at 8:45 a. m. and asked for Blanche. The witness, seeking to hide the fact of her sister's absence, told Durrant that Blanche always left for school at 8:30 a. m. Durrant said he had a book for Blanche, and he left a copy of "The Newcombs" for Blanche. The court then took a recess at this point.

THE CHOLERA SCARE OVER.

The Cholera Scare Over.
AUCKLAND, September 11.—The British steamer Mariposa, which left San Francisco August 22d for Honolulu, Auckland and Sydney, arrived here today. Her captain reported that at Honolulu he learned that the cholera scare which was the subject of a dispatch from San Mills to the State Department at Washington, had passed over. The death attributed to cholera had been traced to poisoned food eaten at a native feast.

The Chinese emigrants who reached Honolulu by the steamer Beagle from Hongkong and who had been suspected of introducing cholera, were released from quarantine before the departure of the steamer from Honolulu.

Attempt to Hold Up a Train.
DENVER, September 11.—A special to the Times from Grand Junction says: An attempt was made to hold up the passenger train which left here last night on the Rio Grande Western at 2:10 this morning. The train had left Greaves, a small station, when the engineer discovered that all the cars except the mail and baggage cars had been detached from the train. It is thought that the robbers wanted to detach the express car, but made a mistake. The robbers escaped.

Buried in an Avalanche.
ROME, September 11.—The avalanche from Altels glacier has fallen upon the hamlet of Spitalmatte. About two square miles of land have been covered. It is feared that six persons and 300 head of cattle perished.

THE ROTHSCHILDS.

Farmer States a Few Facts in a Plain Way.

Question—How did the Rothschilds gain possession of such an enormous amount of gold and bonds?

Answer—A great many years ago their ancestors made the discovery that a limited amount of money, if placed at compound interest, would in time absorb everything in sight. They transmitted this discovery, together with a lot of gilt-edge securities, to their offspring, and the present colossal fortunes of the Rothschilds is the result.

Q.—Did they have any other means besides compound interest to aid them in absorbing the wealth of nations?

A.—Yes. One way was in manipulating the price of bonds at stock exchanges. Another way was in making secret contracts with the head officials of the different countries. It is stated on reliable authority that the Rothschilds cleared $200,000,000 by the purchase of the Egyptian bonds alone, and it is a well-known fact that they have derived an immense amount of revenue, besides interest, out of their transactions in United States bonds.

Q.—Do the methods you have named increase their wealth fast enough to satisfy them?

A.—No; their thirst for plunder knows no bounds. They have gained control of the financial lawmaking of the different nations, and financial laws are constantly being enacted to enable them to fleece the people out of their earnings at much more rapid rate than compound interest or the manipulation of stock exchanges.

Q.—Does the tariff cut any figure in the affairs of these princely bondholders?

A.—Yes. It enables the money power to engage the voters in a sham battle during a Presidential campaign, and by the mesmeric influence of the subsidized orators, and the hypnotizing strains of the brass bands, the voters are made to believe that it is a genuine battle that must be fought to a finish.

A Head-On Collision.

Wilson Ayer and Deputy Sheriff Caughlin came together on their wheels on Sierra street yesterday afternoon.

There was a crash, a mixture of arms, legs, wheels and curse words, and the riders immediately began taking an inventory of the damage.

They were wheeling in opposite directions, and exchanged signals, but there was a misunderstanding. Jack blew for Wilson to go to starboard, but the latter took the signal for larboard, and both turned and came onto each other dead ahead. Backwater bells were rung in, and the wheels were reversed, but it was too late.

Wilson's high-grade Victor struck Jack's seventeen-pound Rambler with terrific force a little abaft the bridge, tearing away the bulwarks, and cutting the hull to the water's edge. She began to fill immediately. Boats were lowered, and Jack was rescued.

Wilson's Victor stood the test wonderfully well, proving that the machine could be used for a blockade runner, or cut through the side of a brick building if necessary. The only damage the Victor suffered was a slight disarrangement of the steering gear and the loss of her spinaker job. Both machines are docked for repairs.

A New Firm.

Sam Armanko and D. W. Dunkle have purchased the stock and fixtures of H. Davis and son on Commercial Row. The new firm took possession yesterday, with Mr. Armanko at the helm.

It is the intention of the new firm and will be their earnest endeavor to make their store one of the most popular trading places in town. The stock will be increased and a full line of novelties, notions, smokers' articles and the best brands of cigars and tobacco will always be found on hand.

Mr. Armanko is well known, having been a resident of Reno for a number of years. He is affable, unassuming and in everything has the attributes of a gentleman and will add many friends to his already long list.

Mr. Dunkle is quite well known in Reno, although owing to his business as a Wells, Fargo & Co. messenger his stay at Reno are comparatively short.

He has interested himself with Mr. Armanko, and the latter will be the resident partner, while Mr. Dunkle will remain in his present position.

The two young men are a good team and the JOURNAL extends to them the best of wishes for success in their new venture.

Will Try for a Record

John Shaver and George Becker left on last evening's west-bound for California. They proceeded as far as the Summit by train last night and at an early hour this morning will mount their bicycles and attempt to make the run of 110 miles to Sacramento by this evening. They were quite confident upon their departure that they would succeed.

Both were in good trim and dressed in regulation style for the long ride. After reaching Sacramento they will decide as to their further movements, but it is probable that on their return they will have many experiences to relate.

To the People of Reno.

Come and talk with me regarding the Viavi treatment. It costs you nothing but your time. I have lived in your midst more than twenty years, and no person can say I ever misrepresented in any way. Neither do I when I tell you of the grand cures Viavi is making. I have proof of every case.

An Up to Date Maid.

Where are you going, my pretty maid? "Up to the drug store sir," she said. What do you need at the drug store, pray?

A package of Tea I need to-day.

Is that what makes your skin so white?

Certainly, sir, for I take it each night.

Now, maiden fair, what may this be?

Why, silly fellow, of course Park's Tea. Sold by S. J. Hodgkinson.

You Keep House?

If so, you cannot afford to be without a bottle of Park's Cough Syrup where it will be handy. Unequalled in croup, whooping cough and the disagreeable colds to which children are subject.

WHITTIER'S BOYHOOD.

The Quaker Poet Had but Scant Instruction In His Youth.

In his boyhood Whittier had scant instruction, for the district school was open only a few weeks in winter. He had but few books; there were scarcely 50 in the house. The one book he read and read again until he had it by heart almost was the Bible, and the Bible was always the book which exerted the strongest literary influence upon him. But when he was 14 a teacher came who lent him books of travel and opened a new world to him. It was this teacher who brought to the Whittiers one evening a volume of Burns and read aloud some of the poems, after explaining the Scottish dialect.

Whittier begged to borrow the book, which was almost the first poetry he had ever read. It was this volume of Burns which set Whittier to making verses himself, serving both as the inspiration and the model of his earlier poetic efforts. The Scottish poet, with his homely pictures of life as bare and as hasty as that of New England then, first revealed to the American poet what poetry really was and how it might be made out of the actual facts of his own life.

That book of Burns' poems had an even stronger influence on Whittier than the odd volume of The Spectator which fell into the hands of Franklin had on the American author whose boyhood is most like Whittier's. Franklin also was born in a humble and hardworking family, doing early his share of the labor and having but a meager education, although always longing for learning. It is true that Irving and Cooper and Bryant did not graduate from college, but they could have done so had they persevered, and Emerson and Longfellow and Hawthorne did get as much of the higher education as was then possible in America. But neither Franklin nor Whittier ever had the chance; it was as much as they could do to pick up the incrusting elements of an education.—Professor Brander Matthews in St. Nicholas.

CUTNIMRODS OLD NIM.

The Petaluma Pot Hunter Tells a Story of a Wondrous Chase.

Frank Timins, the Petaluma pot hunter had the floor, and the crowd breathlessly awaited a thrilling story of the chase.

"You want a story of the chase, eh?" repeated Timins. "Well, I'll tell you the greatest bit of chasin' I ever did in my life. I was out huntin' one day for quail with my ole muzzle loadin' hoggun, when three quail jumped out of a bush right ahead of me. One flew to the right, one to the left, and the other straight ahead, but I got 'em all three."

"Killed three quail going in different directions with a muzzle loading shotgun?" repeated one of his listeners incredulously.

"Yep; that's what I done."

"Your gun must have had three barrels then."

"Nop; only two."

"How did you do it?"

"Well, I killed the one that went to the right with the right barrel; then, quick as a flash, I killed the one that went to the left with the other barrel; then I took after the one that went straight ahead and knocked the stuffin' out of it with the hammed."

"I wouldn't believe that if I told it myself," declared one of the assembled.

"Huh! That ain't nothin'. I killed six quail with one barrel once, and they was all flyin' in different directions."

"Reen 'em all down?"

"Nop; never moved out o' my tracks when they all started out o' the same bunch of grass. I held the gun away over to the right, 'ad as it went off. I swep' it aron to the left. The result was that I sling shot in every direction, same as you can sling water outen a pan, and a little of the shot hatched ev'ry one."—San Francisco Post.

CONSERVATIVE.

The First Use of the Word as an English Political Term.

Canning, and not Croker, was the first to use in English politics the word conservative in its present sense, and too long has Thackeray's "Mr. Wrenham" (Disraeli's "Mr. Rigby") had the credit which belongs to a far more brilliant man. The general assumption has been that the term was earliest employed in the Quarterly Review for January, 1820 (No. 83, page 276), in an article which has been commonly said, but upon no specific authority, have been written by Croker, but its true first use was five years and a half previously.

On June 8, 1824, a dinner was given to George Hibbert, the chairman of the West India Merchants of London, by the members of that body, and several of the leading ministers then serving under Lord Liverpool, the Tory premier, were present. In the course of the proceedings, says a contemporary account, "an observation which fell from Mr. Canning was that the spirit of the present government, as that of all governments ought to be, was essentially conservative."

This appeared in John Bull of June 18, 1824 (page 198), and the apt word was so obviously remarked that it was italicized. Years passed, and Canning had died before the word is again to be met in English politics, but on March 14, 1829, Charles Greville noted in his diary that "Herries told Hyde Villiers that their ('Tories') policy was conservative, that of the Whigs subversive, and that they never could act together."—"The Greville Memoirs," volume 1, part 1, page 192.

The word, employed by both Canning and Herries, was thus "in the air" before it was given in the Quarterly, and this accords with a statement made in the course of a correspondence on the "Etymology of the Word Conservative" which appeared in the Standard at the end of October, 1822, wherein it was said to have been first used in 1820, during the closing controversies upon Roman Catholic emancipation.—Notes and Queries.
